The issues related to gender inequality have become a focus of contemporary debates in recent years, with powerful women voices speaking up against patriarchal and oppressive world for women. The approximately 6 million Roma women in Europe know all too well about the impact of gender inequality. Multiple and intersectional discrimination they face – as women, members of a stigmatized ethnic minority, at higher risk of social exclusion and poverty – pushed them to creatively challenge patriarchal and racialized oppression. The every-day struggle of Roma women have become a foundation for the gradual emergence of Roma feminism as a movement against injustice.

On the occasion of celebrating the International Roma Day (8th of April), the European Roma Institute for Arts and Culture (ERIAC) and Romanian Cultural Institute (RKI) in Berlin celebrate Romani women – as leaders and survivors, guardians and re-inventors of culture, revolutionaries and change-makers. Romnia (Romani women) become the fore-front of a new revolution – both within their own communities and in the majority society at large.

The double exhibition, which takes place at ERIAC and RKI Gallery and is accompanied by a series of additional events, celebrates the agency of Roma women as visionaries of a Europe of tomorrow – challenging minority and majority norms in search for equality. Drawing power from their own communities and their transnational solidarity networks, Roma women imagine a new social fabric, weaving together threads of minority and majority struggles and achievements.
