International Conference

IS “AUSCHWITZ ONLY SLEEPING”?

SINTI AND ROMA NARRATIVES AFTER THE HOLOCAUST

On August 2, 2019, the 75th anniversary of the murder of the remaining Sinti and Roma in the so called “gypsy family camp” will be commemorated at the former German concentration and extermination camp Auschwitz-Birkenau. This day was officially declared by the European Parliament in 2015 as the “European Roma Holocaust Memorial Day” commemorating 500,000 Sinti and Roma murdered in Nazi-occupied Europe.

Main organizers of the conference:

Central Council of German Sinti and Roma, Documentation and Cultural Centre of German Sinti and Roma, European Roma Institute for Arts and Culture (ERIAN) and ternYpe International Roma Youth Network

Main issues of the conference

1. Representation of Roma memory in arts and culture

This panel addresses key questions of the representation of the Roma memory in arts and culture. The arts are a powerful vehicle that can communicate passionately the subjective Roma experiences of the past. In particular, the Holocaust is a common reference point of inspiration and a relevant theme in Roma cultural productions. The arts can also serve as a premise to deal with individual and collective trauma of the past. These cultural productions and artefacts are important in shaping a collective culture of remembrance among Roma throughout Europe and beyond.

2. Roma historical narratives about the Holocaust

This panel looks into historical narratives of Roma about the Holocaust, the recognition of subjective narrations, historical interpretations and testimonies, as well as the existing structures and forms to archive and transmit the memory: What are the Roma historical interpretations of the past and its implications in the present? What are the forms and objects which can transmit the Roma historical memory? What are the Roma historical artifacts and do we have access to them? How are the Roma experiences of the past communicated and transmitted – internally, within the communities – and externally, to the broader non-Roma society.

3. Spaces of memory and representation of the Romani experience

Collective memory requires institutions, spaces and rituals to promote and disseminate a Roma historical narratives of the Holocaust experiences. Currently, there are important initiatives focused on erecting memorials and/or building Roma museums that are taking place in a few places around Europe (Lety, Jasenovac). How can we reinforce networking and exchange of experiences between existing and future institutions representing Roma collective memory, to establish a joined, negotiated and consolidated interpretation of the Roma collective history, including in mainstream institutions?

4. Romani civil rights struggle for recognition and against antigypsyism

Four decades after the hunger strike of Sinti and Roma Holocaust survivors and activists in the former concentration camp in Dachau in 1980, the Romani resistance and civil rights struggle continues against Holocaust denial, for the recognition and fight against antigypsyism, as well as for political, cultural and social rights. This panel creates a space to negotiate current strategies and future perspectives of the Romani struggle, both to strengthen Romani mobilization, as well as to advance processes of uncovering the truth about deeply structural racism, and advancing recognition and remedy for antigypsyism in mainstream institutions.

Opening of the Conference:

Rita Prigmore

Prigmore was born on 3 March 1943 in Würzburg, Germany, together with a twin sister, Rolanda, to a Sinti family. Her parents, Gabriel and Theresia, worked at a theatre in Würzburg. In 1941 Rita’s mother was taken by the Gestapo and forced to sign forms agreeing to be sterilized, under the threat of deportation. Theresia agreed but tried to fall pregnant before her appointment. In summer 1942 the doctors discovered that she was expecting twins. Theresia was told she would be allowed to give birth if she agreed to give her children to the authorities once they were born. She agreed and after their birth, Rita and Rolanda spent most of their time in a university clinic. In April 1943 Theresia headed to the university to see her children and found Rolanda dead after being experimented on. In a panic, she grabbed Rita and ran out of the clinic, but a few days later the authorities took Rita back. She remained there until April 1944. As a child and an adult, Rita started to experience various health problems. She discovered that these were caused by the various brain experiments that had been conducted on her as a child by Nazi doctors. Rita is currently living in Würzburg, Germany and is actively engaged in Roma Holocaust remembrance.

From 1991, Rose took over the management of the Documentation and Culture Centre of German Sinti and Roma in Heidelberg. For years he has been known by the federal and state governments for his resoluteness and his persistent and unyielding work. Together with the Chairpersons of the National Minorities in Germany, Rose leads the Minority Council, which was founded on September 9, 2004. It is the union of the umbrella organizations of the four national minorities which belong to the German nation and have always been resident and autochthonous here. For three decades—since June 1979 to be exact—he has led the work for the civil rights of German Sinti and Roma before the eyes of the German as well as the international public. In May 1995, in cooperation with the member organizations of the Central Council, Rose achieved recognition for German Sinti and Roma as a national minority in Germany with their own minority language, connected with their goal of equal participation in social and political life.

Key note speech:

Rev. Jessie L. Jackson Sr.

The Rev. Jesse Louis Jackson, Sr., founder, and president of the Rainbow PUSH Coalition, is one of America's foremost civil rights, religious and political figures. A top lieutenant to the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., Rev. Jackson has played a pivotal role in virtually every movement for empowerment, peace, civil rights, gender equality, and economic and social justice since the 1960s.

A two-time presidential candidate, Rev. Jackson has led massive voter-registration drives across the South and protests for dispossessed farmers in Iowa and displaced factory workers in the Rust Belt. He was at the forefront of the fight to Free South Africa and has traveled the world on missions of mercy, setting hundreds of captives free. On August 9, 2000, President Bill Clinton awarded Rev. Jackson the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian honour.

For his work in human and civil rights and nonviolent social change, Rev. Jackson has received more than 40 honorary doctorate degrees and frequently lectures at major colleges and universities including Howard, Yale, Princeton, Morehouse, Harvard, Columbia, Stanford, Hampton and the University of KwaZulu-Natal in South Africa. A hallmark of Rev. Jackson's work has been his commitment to youth.
