EDUCATION

WE DREAM THAT WE FORGET WHAT "SEGREGATION" MEANS

In 50 years we would like to see inclusive schools, with dedicated and passionate teachers. Where every child and youth can improve equally and find their profession best suited for them. We dream that we forget what the word "segregation" means - we can just leave it in the past. We dream about the future with no discrimination, with access to education, to information and justice. We dream that personal enrichment, critical analysis, creative output, and purposeful problem solving will be considered an important factual recall in education. We dream about an educational system which is inclusive, diverse, multicultural and where our history, culture and literature are taught.
